Actor Orlando Bloom is mourning the death of his dog Mighty that went missing last week in Montecito.

The Pirates of the Caribbean star made a plea on Instagram posting photos of his dog Mighty offering a reward for anyone with last Wednesday.

On Tuesday Bloom updated his Instagram followers that Mighty has died after his collar was found following a week of searching.

"I have wept more this week than I thought possible, which has been very cathartic and healing... I left no stone unturned, crawled thru all the man holes, under the roads, searched every back yard and creek bed. Had two separate sniffer dogs do their best as well. I feel so grateful to have learned from my little Mighty man that love is eternal and the true meaning of devotion," he wrote.

He also thanked the community for allowing him to search their yards as well as Dog Days Search & Rescue, an animal search and rescue team based in Simi Valley.

Bloom commemorated his small dog with a tattoo on his chest of "Mighty" and an ace of spades.

Mighty's on the other side now. After 7 days of searching from sunrise to sunset and into the wee hours, today, the 7th day ~the number of completion~ we found his collar... I have wept more this week than I thought possible, which has been very cathartic and healing... I left no stone unturned, crawled thru all the man holes, under the roads, searched every back yard and creek bed. Had two separate sniffer dogs do their best as well. I feel so grateful to have learned from my little Mighty man that love is eternal and the true meaning of devotion. I feel sure he was looking down on me whistling in every back yard and knowing that I was doing all I possibly could to respect our bond. He was more than a companion. It was a soul connection for sure. I'm sorry. I love you. Thank you. RIP my MIGHTY HEART my little fellow A ♠'s

♡Thank you to the community for allowing me to search through their yards for him and supporting my midnight walks. It was reassuring to see the best of people even in the worst of times. To the angels of @dogdayssar I'm forever in your debt. You ladies are heaven sent. Lastly thank you to @scottcampbell for the ink. I love you brother♡I

I was out for a jog over the weekend I and remember coming across a couple signs for a missing dog named Mighty. Then I was looking at my news feed today and saw it was Orlando Bloom's dog. What a small world. Hopefully we all see our beloved furry friends on the other side. Rest in peace Mighty

Sorry for your loss man. No human will ever accept us as completely as our dog.

FERNALDPOINT93108 JUL 22, 2020 06:36 PM

I assume the collar showed signs of a predator

I don't need to repeat the COVID-19 statistics, the sad stories of bitter political disagreements and voter suppression, the happy stories of volunteerism and donations, and every other bit of real news to remind anyone that this story is not news. I'm sure it's sad for everyone that loved that dog, but why isn't there media coverage of other lost dogs? I guess it's not news if the person who loves the dog is not famous.

ROGER JUL 22, 2020 02:49 PM

I think people should mind their own business good for him honoring the memory of Mighty with a tattoo..Some people could afford a comfortable life good for them I'm sure he was not even thinking of the legality of getting the tattoo as much as he was thinking of Mighty...I'm sorry for his loss I know what loss is it hurts..Rest in Peace little Mighty.

I knew someone would give me crap about something I thought you had more class obviously I was wrong. One does not match up with the other I choose to write about myself nice try though kinda lame really.

CHEMICALSUPERFREAK JUL 22, 2020 03:07 PM

The "I think people should mind their own business..." statement is at odds with someone openly posting personal details about their lives on social media.

Can't believe the negative here...
He lost his beloved pet !
Probably, didn't sleep for days.
Montecito, has a wonderful, dog community.
If the collar was found...probably a coyote, or bobcat.
The tattoo comments are ridiculous.
A lot of my friends, non celebrity, are going for hair, nails, at their technicians homes.
Please...be kind

LUCKY 777 JUL 22, 2020 01:18 PM

And of course the tattoo was done during the Corona virus lock down, when ALL tattoo studios are required to be closed. So because he's a celebrity he either got a studio to work illegally for him (loss of studio license) or they made a house call (misdemeanor). I'm empathetic with his sorrow, but it is just another example of wealth and privilege.

DUKEMUNSON JUL 22, 2020 02:45 PM

And your post is just another example of pettiness

SNORKY JUL 22, 2020 02:17 PM

The tattoo appears mostly healed. So, timing might be interesting. I'm with Lucky 777 on this one...he could have waited.

A-1595452579 JUL 22, 2020 02:16 PM

Could be he had a friend or family member who was an artist and owns a tattoo gun. I know a couple people like that. No laws/orders, etc against people giving each other tattoos for free.

MINIBEAST JUL 22, 2020 02:12 PM

Rich shaming people is an ugly, pitiable mindset.

EHDAT JUL 22, 2020 01:17 PM

So technically he could still be alive

MINIBEAST JUL 22, 2020 01:50 PM

If the collar wasn't damaged/chewed off/ showing signs that a predator "removed" it, please tell us. Was the collar found attached to a bush or otherwise wiggled out of? "Mighty," as an unaltered male, was highly likely to have been on a quest to procreate. He got out from his fenced yard, which is no surprise if there was a bitch in heat within Mighty's olfactory range. I am hoping this little dog returns home bedraggled and weary from his urgent need to hook up.

BIRD JUL 22, 2020 12:54 PM

So very, very sorry! Strange to find just the collar....

Always tough to lose a loved one. Fur baby lives are much too short.
